OLD GERMAN HALL BEING TORN DOWN BY WRECKERS

The old Germania hall building will soon be no more. It is doomed. This week the work of wrecking the ancient landmark began, and soon it will pass into history. Old timers in passing on Broadway watch the demolition of the old structure with sadness for in days long gone by they gleefully tripped the light fantastic in the old hall. To them it revives pleasant memories of the past and vividly brings to mind the happy events taken place there in the days of their youth.

The building was gutted by a fire a few weeks ago and the owners decided to wreck it and erect a modern structure in its place. L. A. Pollard has drawn the plans for a modern one-story building with sufficient strength to construct a one or two stories above when it is needed. The new structure will cost $15,000. Work on it will begin just as soon as the debris is removed.

The Germania hall building is one of the oldest structures in the county and perhaps one of the best known for it was the first hall constructed in the county and here the youth of the Peninsula came to dance and witness performances of a high class.

Daniel Mullen, the local retired harness maker, in the early days furnished music to the dancers with his violin. No dance in those days was complete without Dan Mullen the musician. For years he conducted a dancing school in the hall.

The building was erected by Martin Kuck and dedicated on Friday night, October 4, 1872, by Bay View Lodge I. O. O. F. This was the tenth anniversary of the lodge and the occasion was taken to dedicate the new hall. It was a gala event. For months the Gazette carried accounts of the construction of the hall. That night the hall was crowded with people from all parts of the peninsula, San Jose and San Francisco. A number of the grand officers of the lodge were present. Every seat was taken when D. M. Jewett stepped forward and offered prayer. Charles N. Black, grand master of the lodge, was the speaker. He spoke for over an hour, giving the history and progress of Redwood City and eloquently commending the builder, Martin Kuck, and dedicated the hall as "Kuck's Germania Hall." As he concluded, Teague, afterwards superior judge of the county, stepped forward and in an address of feeling, presented Fox with a beautiful watch and chain costing $350. Mrs. Low recited a poem which, fitting to the matter and manner of delivery created considerable merriment. During the time Mrs. Low was entertaining the guests of the audience, their eyes were feasting on a pantomine entertainment in the culinary department, the chefs de cusine being a matronly old lady and her buxom daughter.

The dedicatory ceremonies being over the floor was cleared and the dance continued until six o'clock in the morning. It was an enjoyable occasion that is spoken of to this day by the survivors who are only a small fraction of the hundreds that were there.

The hall was used for all occasions, dances, conventions, fairs, meetings of all kinds, not excepting walking matches.

The pedestrian craze that enveloped the country struck Redwood City in 1879. Horace Hawes, Jr., then a young man, arranged a 24-hour walking match. He called for entries, many responded. The hall was roped in as a race track, the audience sitting in tiers of seats around the hall. James Coombs, the colored coachman of young Hawes was groomed to win the race. He was a walker and sprinter and all feared his prowess. However, he entered the race with Joseph Leathers, George Eikerenkotter, William Nichols, Joseph Roney, W. H. Simmons, Matthew Wilson, George Vassar, Antonio Genochio and P. B. James. At 10 o'clock on Thursday night, October 23, 1879, the hall was crowded with friends of the contestants. Horace Hawes was master of ceremonies. In a brief speech he read the rules of the contest and appointed J. J. Cloud and Henry Horton, umpires. Horton came forward in a Cockney accent and urged the boys to play fair and warned them against infractions of the rules. E. F. Fitzpatrick and John Leahy were chosen score keepers. Promptly at ten o'clock the report of a pistol sent the walkers, three abreast on their long tramp. Coombs was the favorite in the betting with Eikerenkotter second, Roney, third, and Genochio fourth. The men plodded around the hall for hours, cheered on by their friends. Coombs, who made a big spert at the beginning, became crippled and withdrew from the contest during the closing hours of the race. He was followed by others and the only ones left were Eikerenkotter, Roney and Genochio. These were declared the winners, with Roney securing the first prize.

Later in the year another match was made which included as enteries, J. Kibbler, known as the Walking Dutchman of Woodside, the Gurrero Brothers and several noted walkers of the time. This was a thirty-six hour match and was won by Kibbler who afterwards entered a six-day walking match at the Mechanics Pavilion in San Francisco. A man named McIntyre won the contest but it was always maintained by Kibler's friends that he was defrauded by the time keeper and should have won.

Many of the best actors and actresses of the country at various times performed in the ancient hall. Joseph Jefferson, the noted actor, appeared in the '80s in Rip Van Winkle. Mrs. Ellen Wilton and Mrs. Cooley and other noted thespians were greeted with large audiences in the hall.

It was in this hall that Senator S. M. Shortridge made his maiden speech on July 4, 1887. It was a master piece and is still preserved in the files of the Times-Gazette. For years after its delivery, budding orators and young lawyers in preparing their orations would get inspiration in perusing the speech from the files, many taking the speech bodily. This first address stamped Mr. Shortridge as an orator. Since then he has risen to become a national figure.

O'Donnovan Rossa, the noted Irish patriot, appeared in the hall in the early '80s. This was a big event. Every Irishman from around the bay was present to listen to the burning eloquence of Rossa. After his address his friends made a collection for the Irish cause and loud was the jingle of the coin that filled the recepticles that were passed around. It was a big collection.

All the political conventions of early days were held in the Germania hall. Here came such men as Governor Stanford, Governor Perkins, Senator Felton, Timothy Guy Phelps, Senator Latham and other noted politicians of that time to deliver addresses. Probably the last convention held there was in 1892 when the republicans met to name candidates. This was the convention that named Henry Walker, district attorney, James T. O'Keefe, for the assembly There was a spirited contest for sheriff that year, between Lucas Greer and W. H. Kinnie, the incumbent. When it came for the nominations for sheriff, Kinnie's name was placed before the convention but the men selected to place Greer before the body remained glued to their seats and Kinnie secured the coveted prize. The bosses were in control that year and Greer always maintained that he was jobbed out of the nomination by this strange political trick. Greer would have won the election. Kinnie was beaten by Philip McEvoy.

The Turnverins always held their meetings here and these occasions were the big doings of the week. The late Harry Grimmenstein was always in charge of thes meetings.

In days gone by the Catholic Fairs were held in the hall. The gaily colored booths with floating banners and nicely dressed young ladies selling wares was a scene never to be forgotten. The church fair was always the occasion or a holiday week.

When the Alhambra theatre was opened on January 1, 1896, Germania hall lost its usefulness. All events were from that time on took place at the more modern hall. The Alhambra was opened with a blaze of glory by the Frawley Company that presented the play, "Men and Women." Judge G. H. Buck delivered the opening address and Charles Josselyn, the owner of the building, made a short address. The company was greeted with a tremendous crowd. W. J. Plump was the lessee of the structure for many years.

The old Germania hall with all its hallowed associations will live long in the memory of the pioneers, now living, who enjoyed many an evening within its walls. If these old walls could speak, what tales they could tell. It is perhaps better that they cannot talk. The building will soon be forgotten but the happy events that took place there in other days will live forever.

Plans Completed For Kiwanis Convention

Plans for the International Kiwanis convention which will be held in Montreal, Canada, from June 7 to 10, are now complete, according to word received from the headquarters of the club. Rev. C. E. Kennedy of this city will represent the Redwood City Club at this session.

Canadian history, depicting the times of the Indian and the French-Canadian settlments of many years ago will be offered in pageant. The French society, St. Jean Baptiste, the Caledonian Society, the Snowshoer's Union, the Hull Kiwanis club, and the 50 Kiwanis bands from all over the North American continent will aid the Montreal Kiwanis club in accomplishing the historical pagantry to the local member and the other 6000 Kiwanian delegates who will visit Montreal in June.

On the opening night of the convention the usual "All Kiwanis Night" program will be held. Some ten-thousand Kiwanians and visitors will attend this occasion in the Canadian city's immense auditorium, known as the "Forum." During this occasion a fifteen minute period will be given over to an expression of international good will and friendship. Simultaneously with this period all the Kiwanis clubs ocated in cities in Canada and the United States will meet for a united observance of the century long friendship between th two countries. Many of the clubs will be directly in touch with the convention by radio, for the program will be broadcast over the United States and Canada.

FIVE POINTS DISTRICT SCENE OF MURDER

With a knife wound in his breast which pierced to the heart and severed one of the main arteries, the body of Claudio Pelgardi, a Mexican laborer, was found Sunday morning in a yard at Five Points by Mrs. Hyder of that district. The sheriff was immediately summoned and the body removed.

An investigation lead to the arrest of Tomasa Rae, another laborer and of Mateo Garvan, alleged to be a bootlegger. Investigations coducted by the sheirff and the district attorney disclosed the story of an all-night orgy of gambling among several Mexicans in a Five Points pool room, followed by drinking in a shack in the rear of the poolroom, where it is said Garvan sold liquor, then a fight between Rae and Pelgardi which ended fatally for the latter.

The story told to the sheriff by the accused killer who was found hiding in a shack in Palo Alto, accords closely with other evidence uncovered by the investigators. Rae claims that he acted in self defense and that the first attack was made by the dead man. He shows a cut in his hat and a deep cut across his forehead to back his story.

An inquest was held Tuesday afternoon at the James Crowe Undertaking parlors at which time several companions of the two men who were in the Garvan shack at the time of the fight testified. All agreed in stating that the fight began in the shack and that the two men continued to fight as they passed through the door and that the battle ended just outside of the shack.

The murder last Sunday morning has added to the determination of county officials to clean up a festering spot in the county. Action looking toward this end was started recently by the board of sueprvisors and will be made more determined by the present case.

CITY BRIEFS

Louis Behrens is back at the First National Bank, after a vacation of three weeks spent in Hawaii.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kellogg attended a field meet at Stockton Saturday in which their son Jack Kellogg, a student at the University of Nevada, participated. Young Kellogg succeeded in taking second place in the 100 and 120-yard dashes.

Mrs. C. L. Collins is chairman of a committee making preparations for an anniversary dinner to be given by Bonita Parlor, N. D. G. W. at the afe de Paris on Tuesday evening.

Redwood Parlor N. S. G. W. will be represented at the session of the Grand Parlos to be held at Santa Rosa Monday by three delegates, A. S. Ligouri, H. W. Mallary and Bud McKay. Roy W. Cloud, histographer and also a member of the local parlor will also attend the convention which will be in session all next week.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Long visited Mr. and Mrs. S. P. McCrae in Madera over the week end and were accompanied home by Mrs. John McCrae who has been visiting in Madera for several weeks.

Mrs. D. McPherson spent a few days with her daughter, Mrs. F. E. George at her home on Stambaugh street this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Holmquist Jr. are receiving the congratulations of their friends upon the birth of a baby girl. The little Miss was born at the Community hospital on Wednesday morning. This is the second child in the family.

Thomas Horgan, the well-known capitalist, is confined to a San Francisco hospital. His illness is not serious but he will be confined to the hospital for a week or more.

The Ladies Aid of the Methodist church held an enjoyable meeting at the church parlors last Wednesday.

Invitations have been issued by the United States Veterans' hospital for an open house to be held at that institution on May 12th to celebrate the birthday of Florence Nightingale, the founder of the Red Cross movement. The hospital will be open to visitors and tea will be served from 2 to 5.

The highway traffic cop, credited with being the only dummy in the local police force, is again back at his post in front of Magruder's real estate office after an absence of several days. The bobby left his post last week and a search by Chief of Police Collins finally located him in a student's hall at Stanford. The cop in question is made of a block of wood, and even going to Stanford has failed to make him anything but a dummy.

Mrs. A. H. Baldwin, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. John Hall and family, has returned to her home in San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Morris entertained the following friends at a picnic lunch at Woodside: Mr. and Mrs. Geo. McNulty, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Potts, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Rice, Mr. and Mrs. Millar Paulsen, Mr. and Mrs. Fred George and Mrs. Paul W. Stevens of Redwood City. Mrs. D. McPherson of Saratoga, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Lewis and Miss Ellen Lewis of San Jose, Sam Vining Killbride of Oakland.

F. X. Sweikert was the guest of honor at a stag party given at his home on Maple street Saturday evening. The following friends were present: Miles Sharkey, C. L. Collins, C. Drathman, Edward McAuliffe, Ernest Hecht, Harry Zimmerman, John Smith of Belmont, Ben Schweikert and F. X. Schweikert.

EXCHANGE CLUB HOLDS LADIES NIGHT AFFAIR

Tuesday night was ladies night at the Redwood City Exchange Club. The members with their wives or lady friends enjoyed a dinner and dance at the home of the Emerald Lake Golf Club in the hills west of this city. An excellent dinner was served by the Fox Shoppe.

Dr. W. H. Murphy was chairman of the evening and Dr. Granville Wood of Stanford University gave a splendid talk on the "Thinking Man." Mrs. J. Mansfield of Palo Alto, accompanied by Mrs. Parker rendered two solos which were musical treats.

At this meeting Carrol Hall, president and W. B. Langston, secretary, of the local club were elected as delegates to the convention of California Affiliated Exchange Clubs to be held at Del Monte June 3-6. A. J. Stebenne and Dr. Murphy were elected as alternates.

Wilbur Doxsee will be chairman of next Tuesday's meeting when J. R. Fox of the American Bridge Co. will address the club.

J. FITZPATRICK AND A. KINCAID FORM PARTNERSHIP

Joseph R. Fitzpatric, the rising young attorney, has formed a co-partnership with Archer Kincaid. They will have joint offices in the Fitzpatrick building. This is history repeating itself. When the late Judge Fitzpatrick graduated from St. Mary's College in 1877 he began studying law in the offices of the late Harvey Kincaid, father of Archer Kincaid. After his admission to the bar in 1880 Mr. Fitzpatrick became a partner of his tutor, Harvey Kincaid, who in his day, was one of the ablest lawyers in the state.

After a lapse of forty years the sons of these pioneer lawyers, form a partnership, their offices being ni the same block as their fathers. Both the elder attorneys are dead but their profession goes on under the able management of their offspring, and with new ideas and modern methods.

In the old days' penmanship formed a big factor in the law office, now the typewriter does the work, the new method of presenting cases is less strenuous. Evolution has played its part in the practice of law. Women attorneys now mix with the men in courts and are coming to the front as counselors. More power to them.

INCORPORATION

Articles of incorporation of Bradley and Ryan, a San Francisco firm, were filed Wednesday in the office of the County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese. The company is incorporated for $25,000, divided into 250 shares of a par value of $100 per share.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY CHARGES ROADHOUSE WITH MISCONDUCT

Charging that the Sixteen Mile House in the northern part of this county was not being properly conducted, District Attorney Swart last Monday asked that the board of supervisors issue a citation, calling upon the proprietor, J. H. Edwards to appear before the board and show cause why his license should not be revoked. This action was accordingly taken by the board and the clerk was instructed to notify Edwards to appear on May 17. Edward's license was granted at a meeting of the board two weeks previous.

BURGLAR CAUGHT IN FAMILY FARM CABIN

Caught in a cabin belonging to Thomas Hayes at the Portola Valley Farm, James Ford was captured Thursday by Sheriff McGovern and Deputy Farrel and lodged in jail here. The report was sent to Sheriff McGovern by a caretaker at the Family Farm that a man had been seen on the premises and he and Farrel immediately went to the farm, where Ford was found in the Hayes cabin.

Hayes stated that he had tried to enter other cabins, but that the Hayes cabin was the only one which he had succeeded in getting into. Finger prints were taken and sent to the bureau of criminal identification at San Francisco and Sheriff McGovern is expecting information regarding the criminal this morning.

ROBT L. SQUIRES BUYS YOUNG DRUG CO.'S STORE

The purchase of the Young Drug Store on Broadway by Robert L. Squires of Petaluma was announced this week. The new owner has taken possession and has moved to this city with his family. Squires is a graduate of the University of California and for the past 15 years has been engaged in the drug business in Petaluma.

C. H. Young, the former owner of the store here, will continue his interest in his Palo Alto store, but will continue to reside here. For the present he will go to his ranch in Napa county for a rest.

BOY SCOUTS HOLD BIG "JAMBOREE"

The second annual jaboree of the Boy Scouts of this county was held Saturday at San Mateo and was attended by 350 boys from all parts of the county, including representatives of all local troops. The affair started with a parade through San Mateo and Burlingame which was headed by the newly organized band composed of Boy Scouts of this county.

Following the parade Saturday morning, the boys encamped at the athletic field of the San Mateo Union high school for the two-day meet which included athletic events, competitive drills and special Boy Scout contests, including tying of knots, making of fire by friction, first aid and signaling. Indoor events were held Saturday evening at the gymnasium of the high school on Second avenue.

Special praise of Boy Scout officials was given the work of the new band recruited from troops in all parts of the county and led by Director E. O. Brose of the high school. With but seven weeks of training, the lads gave a perfarmance equal to that of scout bands with many months' practice.

The big meet closed with an inspection before officials, including Raymond O. Hansen, scout executive of the San Francisco district, who spoke on scouting as a builder of character. There were also the usual church services Sunday morning, with a parade and award of prizes.

Accompanying the boys were scout masters from all parts of the county who aided the boys in the sports. Scoutmasters from Redwood City were Frank Thompson, John Rhoda and S. A. Chamberlain. These men devote their time and work for the furthering of the Boy Scout activities and deserve a great deal of credit. A great deal of the success of the Boy Scout movement has been due to the high class of men who have been willing to secrifice their own time to assume the leadership of the organization.

POOL ROOM LICENSE REVOKED BY BOARD

The license of Louis Gazanno to conduct a pool room at Five Points was revoked Monday by the board of supervisors upon a motion of Supervisor Hickey. Gazanno was called to be present before the board and explain some facts in regard to a murder which was committed in that district Sunday morning. A Mexican who stated that he was a mechanic but had not worked at the trade lately, was cited to appear.

Both Gazanno and the Mexican who is stated to have been a dealer at gambling games at the pool hall, stated that the murdered man and the killer were both gambling in the pool hall all night. As these places are only licensed to remain open until 12 o'clock and as gambling games are prohibited, the license was taken away from Gazanno was ordered to close his house.

The application for a pool room licence by three men who wish to conduct another pool room at Five Points was laid over for a month, although both the sheriff and district attorney reported very favorably upon the place and the men making the application.

WOMEN SEEK HONOR FOR COUNTY PIONEERS

Mrs. A. Kincaid and Mrs. E. Winter appeared before the board of supervisors at their regular meeting last Monday and asked that money be appropriated for the erection of a suitable tomb stone over the grave of James Peace in the Union cemetery. Peace was one of the earliest white residents of this section of California and was the first man to raise the United tSate flag in what is now this county. His grave is now marked by a wooden head board.

Mrs. Kincaid and Mrs. Winter represented the Womans Relief Corps, which has been responsible for placing tombstones on the graves of Union soldiers in the cemetery. The organization felt that the man who was the first to raise the Stars and Stripes in the county should be also be honered.

Upon a motion of Supervisor Hickey, the board appropriated $50 for this purpose and appointthe two ladies as a committee to attend to securing the stone and having it suitably inscribed.

SERVICES HELD FOR MRS. G. M. BRESSE

Funeral services were held yesterday from the James Crowe parlors for Mrs. Emma L. Bresse, wife of Gustav L. Bresse, who passed away Wednesday morning at her home on Elwood street after a long illness. Funeral services were also held at the Cypress Lawn Crematory chapel. Many beautiful floral offerings from any friends testified to the esteem in which the deceased woman was held.

Mrs. Bresse was a native of New York, but had spent the past twenty years of her life in Redwood City. She is survived by her husband, by two daughters and a sister, rMs. James G. Stansbury of 54 Grand street. Her elder daughter, Miss Dorothy Bresse is supervisor of music in the local school department, the other daughter, Miss Loraine Bresse is connected with the local office of the California Pacific Title Insurance Co. Mr. Bresse is a business man of San Francisco

Mrs. Bresse was a sweet and amiable woman, whose loss is keenly felt by her neighbors and many friends, whose sympathy is extended to the bereaved family.

FUNERAL HELD FOR MRS. MURRAY MONDAY

The sudden and unexpected death of Mrs. J. J. Murray in St. Joseph's hospital in San Francisco last Saturday was a severe shock to her many friends on the peninsula.

Friday afternoon she visited at her daughter's home in Menlo Park, a short distance from her own, when she suddenly became ill. An ambulance was called and she was removed to the hospital, where she expired some time after from a paralytic stroke. Six months ago she suffered a slight stroke but soon recovered. Her brother, Dr. Stafford, was at her bedside at the hospital and did all he could for his sister.

Mrs. Murray was formerly Minnie Stafford and was born and raised in Redwood City, attended the grammar school and grew to girlhood here. Some ten years ago she married J. J. Murray of Menlo Park. She took an active part in all the social affairs there, being prominent in church work, in the activities of the Native Daughters and the National Council of Catholic Women. Mrs. Murray was a leader in all social functions and took a deep interest in the welfare of the town. She will be sorely missed in that community for which she gave her best energies.

Mrs. Murray was a woman of true Christian ideals always doing good and working for some worthy cause. She had many friends throughout the peninsula who loved her for her many good qualities of mind and heart. Mrs. Murray will be missed by many who followed her wise counsel and advise in many things looking to the welfare of the county.

Mrs Murray was the only daughter of the late James Stafford, a pioneer groceryman of Redwood City, who established one of the first grocery stores in Redwood City in the '60s.

The funeral on Monday last at the Church of the Nativity, Menlo Park, was largely attended by sorrowing relatives and friends. A long line of automobiles followed the remains to Holy Cross cemetery where all that was mortal of the good woman were consigned to their final resting place.

Besides her husband she is surpived by her two children, Florence Gilbert and three brothers, Dr. David Stafford of San Francisco and D. R. Stafford and George Stafford of this city.

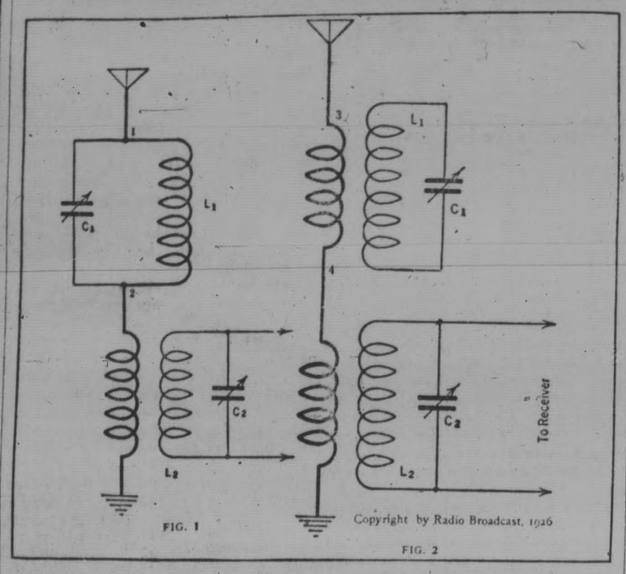
RADIO



Wave Trap Will Cut Out Loud Locals—The Conductively Couple Form and the Inductively Coupled.

Due to the widespread increase in power of many of our broadcasting stations, the need for some sort of apparatus capable of cutting out strongly interfering stations, is becoming felt more and more. There is not much fun in sitting through the program of one particular station night after night, especially when a better program is being offered by some other station which is drowned out by the nearer or more powerful transmitter. "Interfering signals," writes Howard E. Rhodes in the Radio Broadcast magazine, "sometimes are caused by driect pickup by the coils of the set so that its natural selectivity is of no avail in eliminating them. This occurs when the set is being operated in proximity to a broadcasting station, with the result that the field strength in the vicinity is great enough to induce currents directly in the various coils of the receiver. Under these conditions it will be found possible to hear the program with the antenna disconnected.

"The only practical methods to be used in eliminating this type of interference are either shielding of the receiver or using some form of closed-field coil, such as a toroid. If the set is to be shielded, it is necessary to line the entire inside of the cabinet, including the cover and the panel, with thin copper. Any joints in the copper sheet are soldered together and connection is finally made between the shield and the minus A terminal which, in this instance, is connected to ground. This puts the entire shield at ground potential, thereby excluding from the coils any external electrical fields. It should also be pointed out that this shielding will also eliminate any interference caused by power lines, motors, etc., provided they are causing trouble by setting up currents directly in the coils. However, if the interference is reaching the set by way of the antenna system, shielding will be no aid. The use of toroid coils is coming into very common use in instances where there is need of an inductor that is unaffected by external fields."

Why Toroid Coil Is Favored.

The gist of Mr. Rhodes' explanation why the toroid type of coil is recommended for use where ordinary coils will cause broad tuning by their pick-up qualities, is as follows: Toroid coils will, as is the case with other coils, have induced in their turns currents which ordinarily would nullify the selective qualities of a receiver. However, the voltages induced in opposite halves of the coil, oppose each other, and the resultant effective pick-up voltage is zero. This nullifying feature is apparent in several other types of coils, but is probably more so in the toroid. The article in Radio Broadcast continues as follows:

"There is a second type of interfering signal that causes considerable trouble, and against this type the two cures so far described are useless. If the signals being induced in the antenna are sufficiently strong, it is possible that a receiver may not have a selectivity sharp enough to eliminate them completely, although its selectivity under ordinary conditions may be perfectly satisfactory. For instance, the receiver might be operated at a location quite close to a powerful broadcasting station so that the signal strength from this station in comparison with the strength of the signals that it is desired to receive from other stations is so great as to produce considerable interference, even though the receiver is considerably detuned from the interfering signal. It is apparent then, that, in some way, this powerful signal must be impeded so as to decrease its strength. The most common piece of apparatus for use in this connection is the so-called wave trap which is actually a filter circuit tuned to absorb the interfering signals. These wave traps are very easily constructed, and cost little. They consist merely of an ordinary coil and a condenser. The traps are connected in the antenna circuit and are adjusted so that, at the frequency of the interfering signal, they have a very high impedance, the exact value depending on whether the unit is connected in series or parallel with the antenna. This high impedance prevents the signal from passing down through the primary of the antenna coupling and so into the receiver. At the same time, these wave traps offer a very low impedance to all other frequencies.

Methods of Operation.

"There are several methods by which these traps might be operated. Fig. 1 shows the most common method. In the drawing L_1 C_1 constitutes the trap circuit and L_2 C_2 the antenna coupler and tuning condenser of the receiving set. It will be seen that the trap is connected between the antenna post of the receiver and the antenna lead-in. Fig. 2 represents a slightly different method of connecting the trap in the circuit. In this latter method, the wave trap is inductively coupled to the antenna. This inductive coupling is obtained by winding a few turns of wire about one end of the coil L_2. One end of this new winding connects to the antenna and the other to the antenna post of the receiver. This circuit is practically equivalent to that of Fig. 1 with the difference that somewhat sharper tuning is obtained.

"Whether the trap circuit of Fig. 1 or that of Fig. 2 is used, depends to a considerable extent upon the characteristics of the antenna system. A well insulated antenna with a short lead-in and a short ground wire to a good ground, such as the cold-water mains, gives best results with the inductively coupled circuit. Every effort should be made to have as good a ground and antenna as is possible, but if it is necessary to use a long ground lead to a rather poor ground system, the direct coupled wave trap will probably give better results.

"When using the latter method of direct coupling, as illustrated in Fig. 1, some small change in the tuning of the antenna condenser will be noticed, whereas with inductive coupling practically no change in tuning takes place. This represents a slight advantage in favor of inductive coupling since it will be possible to continue to use the same old dial readings after the trap has been installed.

"If the trap is poorly made," says Mr. Rhodes in conclusion, "it may not only eliminate the interfering signals but will also decrease the strength of those signals we desire to receive. The most common cause of poor results with wave traps is due to the use of high resistance coils and low-grade condensers. It is therefore essential that the trap operate efficiently, and in order to obtain such operation, it is generally best to use a fairly small coil and a large condenser. With a large coil the elimination is usually more complete but the neutralized band is larger so that the trap interferes with reception on wave lengths adjacent to that wave on which the interfering station is operating. Most satisfactory results are obtained when low loss coils are used, such as space wound solenoids, while a toroid may be used in the inductively coupled circuit."

Popular Solenoid Coils Are Very Satisfactory

The bureau of standards, in its latest report on coils used for broadcast reception, sets forth the following:

A loose basket-weave coil, wound with 32-38 Litz wire, is the most efficient.

The popular solenoid, wound single layer on a hard rubber cylinder with No. 24 DCC wire, is a close second and more desirable from the viewpoint of cost. It is a low-loss coil of great excellence.

A two-layer bank wound coil is the worst.

Six broken strands in Litz wire increase the radio frequency resistance only 0.3 ohm.

Binders on coils are sanctioned, especially collodion.

No. 16 DCC is found to have lower resistance on high waves, but higher even than No. 28 on lower waves.

For the solenoid coil, 60 turns of No. 24 DCC wound on a hard rubber form 3.19 inches in diameter and 1.77 inches long is ideal. Tuning condenser may be .0003 mfd., the size between .00035 and .00025.

This information is of value to the man who winds his own coils. The man who assembles a set from manufactured parts may trust the manufacturer to furnish efficient coils as long as the manufacturer is one of recognized standing in the industry.

Increased Volume Ruins Tubes

No matter what kind of tubes are used in a set, every operator should remember that increasing the volume and overheating the filament is a wasteful practice. The proper temperature of the filament is ascertained by observing its brilliancy, or, more accurately, by using a voltmeter to indicate the voltage which is used across it.

Some Radio Figures

There are about 1,000 broadcasting stations in the world, of which 538 are in the United States. There are approximately 8,000,000 radio sets in use, 5,000,000 of which are "tube" sets and the remainder the crystal type.

HAS CLEAREST SKIES IN WORLD

Quetta May Be Chosen for Smithsonian-Geographic Observatory.

Washington.—Quetta, in Baluchistan, near which it is probable that a new solar observatory will be established by the National Geographic society and the Smithsonian institution, is familiar—as a name—to readers of Kipling and workers of cross-word puzzles, but probably means little to most Americans. The city and its region, recently visited by Dr. C. G. Abbot, assistant secretary of the Smithsonian institution, are the subjects of a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Quetta exists primarily for military purposes," says the bulletin, "but the Pax Britannica that has been substituted for the lawlessness and banditry of former days has made an important civil community and trading center of it as well. Baluchistan is India's fortress to the east, and Quetta is its donjon keep. The British have been in control of the place since 1877, and since 1882 have held it under perpetual lease from its old ruler, the picturesquely named Wali of Kalat.

"When the British went in Quetta was only a little group of mud huts surrounded by unhealthy plains that were virtually swamps. Drainage and sanitation have made the place over. Now Quetta has a population of about 30,000; and the once swampy lowlands furnish a setting for villas and farmhouses surrounded by orchards and planted groves.

Mud Gives Way to Iron.

"The outstanding feature of Quetta, still, however, is the cantonment where six or eight regiments of British and Indian troops are quartered. This extensive post is to the north on relatively high ground while the civil town is to the south on a lower level. Mud, in the form of sun-dried brick, is still a most important building material in the town, though not to the extent that it was two decades ago. Then mud-brick domes formed many of the roofs, and were considered safe because of Quetta's scant rainfall (about 10 inches annually). But there came an unusually wet spring, and most of Quetta's buildings melted away. Since then many iron roofs—less picturesque, but better insurance against weather vagaries—have surmounted the mud walls of the town.

"The permeation of Quetta by British, or perhaps more broadly, by Western, influence, is a phenomenon that cannot be escaped by anyone who has known the town over a series of years. The standard of living rises before his eyes. Tea, a little while ago a marked luxury, is becoming a common beverage. Leather footwear has displaced sandals to a noteworthy degree; all classes are wearing warmer and more comfortable clothing; and the native women are decking themselves out in more ornaments, after the manner of their prosperous sisters in other climes.

"The climate of Quetta has interesting aspects. The place is in the same latitude as Cairo; Jacksonville, Fla.; and Shanghai; but, because of its 6,000 feet of altitude and the physical aspect of the surrounding country, its climate is very different. Each day the mercury bobs up and down through a wide range. The difference between daily maximum and minimum has been known to reach 80 degrees; but such excessive changes are confined to certain short seasons. The hills and even the valleys of Baluchistan are largely treeless, and when the sun is down heat radiates away rapidly. As a consequence the nights are always cool—

"In the matter of combating the climate, there is nothing like an American standard of comfort in the homes even of Europeans in Quetta. The winters in general are no more severe than those of Washington, but the houses are so constructed that it is most difficult if not impossible to keep warm. The rooms are huge—16 by 25 feet or so, with ceilings 18 to 24 feet high. Small fireplaces are set far into the very thick walls and what little warmth they radiate into the rooms is lost in their vastness. Yet coal of fair quality is mined nearby and is used in the town. Its use in modern heating systems could make Quetta homes as comfortable as any in the world.

"Clearest Sky in the World."

"If the National Geographic-Smithsonian solar observatory is established in Baluchistan it will be placed on top of 7,525-foot Kojak peak about 40 miles north of Quetta near the railroad which pierces the Kojak range and extends to Chaman, ten miles beyond on the Afghan border. To the east beyond the Kojak mountains the Registan or Helmand desert stretches for more than 100 miles. It is 60 miles to the nearest mountains in the north. To the east lies a long, broad valley. On this relatively isolated mountain ridge on the edge of the desert the precipitation is even less than in Quetta—probably seven inches or less per year. When Doctor Abbot visited the Kojak peak in January he reported that the sky was perfectly blue right up to the sun's edge and added: 'It was the clearest sky I have ever seen in the world.'"

FARM VALUES DECREASE 25 PER CENT IN 5 YEARS

Shrinkage From $66,316,002,602 to $49,546,523,759 Reported After Agricultural Census.

Washington.—A shrinkage in the value of American farms and farm buildings from $66,316,002,602 in 1920 to $49,546,523,759 in 1925 was estimated in the Department of Commerce in a preliminary report on the latest agricultural census. The decrease amounts to a little more than 25 per cent.

Farm acreage in the same period declined from 955,883,715 to 924,889,380 acres, and the department's division of land economics calculated the decline in the average acre value of land and buildings at 22 per cent, and for land alone at 28 per cent. The value of farm buildings, it explained increased 6 per cent.

The 1925 figures, compared with those for 1910, indicated an increase of 35 per cent in the average farm value, but considering the drop in the purchasing power of the dollar during that interval, the economists concluded there was actually a net decline of 10 to 12 per cent during that period.

The decline during the last five years was not general, the department's experts found, the shrinkage in values having been greatest in the range country, the wheat and corn belts, and the eastern cotton states, while a slight increase was recorded in New England and the Middle Atlantic states. In the Mountain states, the decline amounted to 41 per cent, in Iowa 34 per cent, and in Georgia 40 per cent. The increase in New England was 6 per cent and in the Middle Atlantic states 1 per cent. Pacific coast values remained constant.

Collapse of the war land boom, with a fall of corn and hog prices, accounted largely for the decline in Iowa, the experts reported, while the decrease in Georgia was due chiefly to the boll-weevil and the exodus of negro workers. In the range country and mountain states, they said, drought and the collapse of wheat prices were the leading causes.

The increase in farm values in the Northwestern states was attributed to a great extent to the development of the dairy industry, the favorable position respecting markets, and an increased demand for farm land for recreational purposes.

Gives Wife to Buddy, Then Gets Divorce

Milwaukee, Wis.—Judge Gustave G. Gehrz granted a divorce to Roman Wisniewski, who charged that his wife, Helen, had been stolen from him by Benjamin A. Miller, Chicago, who was his buddy in the Russian army and best man when he married.

Wisniewski located in Milwaukee and Miller in Chicago. In 1924 his wife joined him. Miller came from Chicago to visit. The husband began to suspect Miller and his wife.

Each acknowledged love for the other, whereupon he told his wife his friend should have her. The husband accompanied him and the wife to the depot, bought the tickets and gave Miller $5.

The following month Mrs. Wisniewski returned to her husband, and he took her back. Later the husband again began to suspect his wife and he sued for a divorce.

Through an interpreter Mrs. Wisniewski denied she ever had been in love with Miller. She admitted that she had gone to Chicago with him but said she had done so because of anger. While in Chicago she lived alone and supported herself, she testified.

TIBET HAS REAL AMERICAN INDIAN

Find Throws Light on Origin of Natives of This Continent.

Washington.—In far-away Tibet, 6,000 miles distant from the nearest point of the American continent, there exist true American Indian types. This conclusion, which throws much important light on the question of the origin of the American Indian, is one of the profoundly significant fruits of a remarkable journey of 50,000 miles, covering half the globe and occupying seven months, which Dr. Ales Hrdlicka made under the joint auspices of the Smithsonian Institution and the Buffalo Society of Natural Science last year, and the first account of which now appears in the annual exploration pamphlet of the Smithsonian Institution.

Doctor Hrdlicka, who is curator of physical anthropology in the United States National museum and who recently published a description of the new type of white American, undertook his journey to survey what has been and what is being done in the study of ancient man and of the fossil apes in France, in India, in Ceylon, Java, Australia and South Africa. Such a world survey of the position of physical anthropology is perhaps unique, and it produced results of great significance.

Of the types found in Tibet (and elsewhere in eastern Asia) Doctor Hrdlicka says that they are so true to that of the American Indian that if they were transplanted into America nobody could possibly take them for anything but Indian. Men, women and children resemble the American aborigines in behavior, in dress and even in the intonations of their language. The importance of the light his discovery throws on the origin of the native Americans is obvious.

After a brief stop in France Doctor Hrdlicka early in April last year took ship to India, stopping to examine some Arab types at Port Said and Aden. Of the pure-blood Arab, the anthropologist says that he shows a lively, intelligent white man's physiognomy (though mostly brown in color), and that the higher class pure Arab is often as light as the southern European.

In India Doctor Hrdlicka visited the Siwalik hills, an area that probably is the richest source of anthropoid ape fossils in existence. Within the last two years five or six new varieties of such fossil anthropoids have been found there.

Migration of Negrito.

At present one of the most interesting problems in anthropology is to explain the presence of the Negrito in the Philippines and Andamans. How did he get to his present homes? His nearest relatives are apparently the pygmies of central Africa, but a great unbridged space has till now separated the two. If he extended from Africa he must have left traces of his passing in Arabia and India. Such traces, so far at least as the Indian coast lands are concerned, Doctor Hrdlicka became satisfied do exist. They occur in Parganas, northwest of Calcutta, in at least one area along the eastern coast, here and there among the Dravidians and in the Malabar hills. These discoveries bring the Negrito a long way farther to the westward and so much nearer Africa, making his derivation from that continent so much the more probable.

With regard to the bulk of the present population of India, Doctor Hrdlicka believes he can say with confidence that it is mainly composed of three ethnic elements—the Semitic, the Mediterranean, and in certain parts the Hamitic, or North African. The Aryans show everywhere either the Semitic or the Mediterranean type. Doctor Hrdlicka saw nothing that could be referred to the types of central or northern Europe. It would seem, therefore, that the Aryans came from Persia and Asia Minor rather than from or through what is now European Russia.

Hears of Wild Men.

Passing through Ceylon, where he reports no definite trace as yet of geologically ancient man, Doctor Hrdlicka proceeded to Java, touching at Sumatra and the Straits Settlements. Of Sumatra, a country not yet perfectly known, he says that "there still prevail in the island, among the whites as well as the natives, beliefs in the existence of wild men. There are said to be two varieties. The Orang Pandak (orang—man, pandak—short) is said to live in the almost impenetrable mountain forests of the central and southern parts of the island. The natives describe him as black, short, long-haired and wild, but not insurmountably shy. The second form is the Orang Sedapak. He is said to live in the unhealthy lowlands of the southern part of Sumatra. He is described as having the body of a child of twelve, with long red hair on head and body. He is very shy and runs but does not climb.

In the mountainous regions of the upper parts of the Malay peninsula, according to information given to Doctor Hrdlicka, there still live thousands of negritoid people, and there are many old caves waiting to be explored.

The visit to Java was made chiefly to inspect the site of the Pithecanthropus, but Doctor Hrdlicka also desired to satisfy himself as to any possible cultural traces of early man, and as to the present population.

When the actual site of the Pithecanthropus was reached by Doctor Hrdlicka, a whole gang of natives advised by the police were already waiting there, each bringing a little pile of fossils gathered from the muddy ledges of the river as they were exposed by the receding water. These fossils were eagerly examined and a good selection was made for the National museum, but they included no remains of any primate.

In the eastern portion of Java Doctor Hrdlicka found traces of the pre-Malay Hindoo population which peopled the island in early historic times. In the central part of Java these people evidently reached a rather high degree of culture and left imposing ruins.

Full-blood and otherwise full-colored Australians, but with tow hair, were one of the phenomena observed in a boat journey along the western coast of Australia. Doctor Hrdlicka also attended some of the impressive ceremonies of the native Australians.

Sheds New Light.

"The data obtained in Australia," writes Doctor Hrdlicka, "throw a very interesting and to some extent new light on the moot questions of both the Australian and Tasmanian aborigines. According to these observations, the Australian aborigines deserve truly to be classed as one of the most fundamental and older races of mankind, and yet it is a race which shows close connections with our own ancestral stock—not with the negroes or Melanesians (except through admixture), but with the old white people of postglacial times.

As to the Tasmanians, the indications are that they were but a branch of the Australians, modified perhaps a little in their own country. Both peoples have lived and the Australians of the Northwest live largely to this day, in a paleolithic stage of stone culture. They are still making unpolished stone tools, which in instances resemble the Mousterian implements or later European paleolithic types. But they are also capable of a much higher class of work. Today, about Derby, bottles are used in making beautifully worked spear heads."

From Australia Doctor Hrdlicka's journey led to South Africa, and disembarking at Durban, Natal, the first task was to see as many as possible of the Zulu, about whose exact blood affinities there was some doubt. From an examination of many individuals the anthropologist reached the conclusion that the Zulu is unquestionably a true negro, though now and then, as in other negro tribes, showing a trace of Semetic (Arab) type due probably to old admixtures.

The two main objects of the visit to South Africa were the investigation of the spot of the important find of the Rhodesian skull, and of the recent discovery of the skull of a fossil anthropoid ape at Taungs, which had been reported as being possibly a direct link in the line of man's ascent. The Rhodesian skull, found in 1921 at Broken hill, shows a man so primitive in many of its features that nothing like it has been seen before. Doctor Hrdlicka was able to clear up some of the moot points in connection with this important find, and he collected for study bones of animals from the cave which gave the Rhodesian skull, as well as two additional mineralized bones belonging to two individuals, all of which were deposited with the earlier relics in the British museum.

Land Rich in Material.

The fossil skull of an anthropoid ape, found in Taungs in 1924, belongs, according to Doctor Hrdlicka, to a species of anthropoid ape of about the size of a chimpanzee and evidently related to this form, though there are certain differences, especially in the brain. These differences suggested that this ape may possibly have been somewhat superior to the chimpanzee and nearer to the human. But it is not necessarily a form that stood in the direct line of the human phylum.

Bootblacks Still Ply Trade in Chinatown

San Francisco. — The wandering bootblack with his small box and brushes remains an institution in Chinatown immune to the waves of modernism transforming the oriental district.

Every morning these embryo business men sally forth to ply their trade and for years the Chinese boys have regarded the city hall of justice, which borders Chinatown, as a favored zone. Even the august presence of Chief of Police Dan O'Brien is invaded daily.

A pitched battle between bootblacks of Chinatown and the Italian quarter at North Beach resulted recently when the Italian lads decided to enter the lucrative hall of justice field. The invasion was repelled, but in retaliation the Italian boys declared a ban against the orientals in a district to the north. Since that time peace has prevailed in both camps.

The high school bond committee of fifty, representing five churches, the chamber of commerce, the American Legion Post, Parent-Teacher association, Women's Civic Improvement club and citizens of thirteen elementary school districts in the Union High School district, boosted the $270,000 bond election, held at Sanger, Fresno county, recently.

There was no shooting of skyrockets or tooting of whistles, but a little group of men gathered in the shadow of the big steel tank which has so recently been built upon its tall supports in the heart of Wasco. Kern county, and there witnessed the fruition of their dreams, the completion of a project first urged several years ago. The "juice" was sshot to the forty-horsepower motor which turned the bowls in the new test pump and started water from the new utility district well flowing through the 30,000 feet of lines which comprise the new Wasco water system.

How Steering Wheel Works

The most recent improvement over the time-honored steering wheel for ships, says Popular Science Monthly, is an electric controller that closely resembles those used on street cars. A slight turn of the control handle by the helmsman causes the rudder to respond instantly.

MOTHERS' DAY

AS we come again to Mothers' Day our minds recall the now famous words of our great martyred president, words which will go down in history, side by side with his greatest address: "All that I am or ever hope to be I owe to my sainted mother." The words of Lincoln are the ideas of all truly great men whether by them uttered or unexpressed, for what ever position may be attained in the events of the world, the mind in its quite moments returns to the days of childhood, and draws its inspiration from the memories of home and mother.

If any one influence is responsible for the development of rational human beings from our beastile ancestors of prehistoric times, that influence has been the maternal instinct of the mothers of the race. In every animal species this instinct is present, but in the human race only does it continue throughout life. The cat mother is as tender of her kitten as the human mother of her baby. But as soon as the kitten is grown, it becomes to her merely another cat. This is true of other animals, but the mother instinct remains longer the higher the animal stands upon the scale of development. When this instinct became more than an instinct and began to dominate the action of individuals throughout life, the animal which millions of years ago roamed the plateau of central Asia, ceased to be merely a ground sloth and became the ancestor of man.

Here then was born the spark of the flame which was to develop into all modern advancement. This was the beginning of the family relationship, the beginning of the community, of the tribe and nation, and all that these have since come to mean in racial developments.

We have heard it jokingly remarked that if it were not for the mothers, there would be very few men. Well, this is true enough, it is also true in a deeper and more subtile way than is generally understood. Without the development of mother love there would not have been any human beings.

Keep Regulatory Bodies Above Politics

WHEN local politicians are unable to drag public utility companies into politics over rate questions which are under the jurisdiction of the state public service commission, they periodically attempt to discredit the commission. Practically every state has witnessed examples of this kind.

The average public utility or railroad commission is today rendering decisions which in most instances are on a par with court rulings, from the standpoint of the thought and consideration given to them.

It takes a whole lot of nerve for a state or utility commissioner to hand down a decision based upon fact, which is contrary to political pressure that is brought against him. To the everlasting credit of the commissions, however, many decisions of this nature have been rendered within the past few years and the public has gradually come to see that rate making is a business question and not a political issue. The farther the two can be separated, the better it is for the people.

Attempts to drag the state commissions into politics simply show how far the proponents of such measures are out of touch with the public thought on this question. The consuming public and the investor would much rather trust a duly constituted commission to give them justice, than they would to be left at the mercy of the local politician whose principal aim may be to stir up a campaign issue to secure votes.

It's just our own opinion, of course, but it would seem to us that instead of sending missionaries to far-off Africa to convert the negroes, it might be possible to find need of Christ's teachings among a people, who because one man commits a crime, will drive two hundred families from their homes and burn them behind them, and burn the church which represents the very religion which we are endeavoring to spread among the heathen.

"The broadening of human sympathy, the freedom of will", says Mrs. Jennie C. Croly, of the original Sorosis, "give rise to a thousand new forms of activity, all looking toward wide fields of effort, a larger unity, a more complete realization of the eternal idea: the Fatherhood of God, the motherhood of woman, the brotherhood of man."

MONTHLY REPORT OF HORTICULTURAL COMMISSIONER

The inspection of the potato pack in the auction market at Colma has required considerable time of this office during the past month. My efforts have been directed toward the establishment of a pack which would be satisfactry to the state and county inspectors in San Francsico and such other cities in which the Colma potatoes are marketed. I believe that the growers now understand what is required of them and do not anticipate much further difficulties. I wish to thank the management of the Colma Vegetable Growers Association for the thorough co-operation which they have given me in this work.

On April 13th and 14th a meeting was held in the Ferry building, San Francisco, of the Central Coast Counties Horticultural Commissioners Association. The purpose of the meeting was to discuss methods of more uniform inspection of the various commodities which are shipped from one to the other of these counties, such as potatoes and other vegetables, an interchange of ideas in regard to new insect pests and plant disease methods and a discussion of proposed standardization and quarantine regulations which are to be taken up at the state convention in San Diego in May with particular reference to those which are of special interest to this section.

While in attendance at the above meeting, the commissioners had the opporutnity of visiting the section of Alameda county infested with the European earwig, the district being along San Pablo avenue from Oakland north to the Contra Costa county line. This section constitutes the only infestation of this inect as far as known in this state. I wish to caution residents of this county to be very careful of all material, not only nursery stock but any goods requiring packing material, which they may ship in from this section. The pest is not only injurious to plants but gets into the house, ninto bedding, food, etc., very much as the cockroach, to which it is nearly related. It is to be hoped that we may be able to prevent its introduction into this county.

Four hundred and seventy-three shipments of 199,540 plants were inspected during April, 107 shipments of 19788 plants being from points outside of the state. A total of 176,480 strawberry plants were inspected and planted in the county this month, this being the largest amount coming in any one month for some time.

Respectfully submitted,
A. W. TATE, Jr.,
Horticultural Commission, San Mateo County.

EXPLAIN AIMS OF NEW STUDY CLUB

The Menlo Park Study Club was organized April 2, 1924. Its obejcts are intellectual and civic interests. The membership has more than doubled. It is federated with the County, District and State Federation of Women's Clubs.

For our programs we enjoy hearing a district or state chairman speak one month, and the next papers on California history by our own members are read.

It has been very easy for our members to study California history, because at early times men prominent in California affairs settled in Menlo Park. Among them was United States Senator Leland Stanford; who founded Stanford university, only one mile from Menlo Park. Timothy Hopkins, Milton S. Latham, Charles N. Felton, Joseph A. Donohue, John O'Kane, Major Rathbone, Faxon Atherton and Thomas Selby

The name Menlo was brought to this section by two early settlers named Oliver and McGlinn. They purchased a tract of land facing on what is now the state highway and painted over the entrance to their property the name "Menlo Park." Menlo was originally spelled Menlough, and is the name of an old castle in Dublin.

To the Easterner the name California spells 'Sunshine and Roses.' The Californian knows however that almost every kind of climate can be found within the borders of the state, but it is not strange that men prominent in California affairs settled in Menlo. They proved themselves to be men of accurate appraisement, for truly the search for the ultimate in climate ends when one reaches Menlo Park.

California history, however, is only one of the many things which a woman is able to study more effectively by being a member of a Federated Club.

To be a member of a Federated Club means more to a woman than mere social activities. It means mental growth. Where is woman that does not want to grow mentally? After marriage many women become so interested in their homes and children that they forget the outside world, even forget to read good publications consistently, resulting in mental stagnation.

Many women have said "Oh, I haven't time to attend club meetings so tiis useless to belong." Those are the very women that should make every effort to not only attend club meetings but take an active part. Why? Because, when you attend a Federated Club meeting and hear a district or state chairman of any one of the many splendid departments speak, you cannot help but feel bigger and better for having attended that meeting. You feel so inspired that your dinner that night is just a litle easier to prepare, you will be a little more patient with the little question boxes, and when dear husband comes home there is something else to talk about besides the usual routine of a busy mother's day at home. You will mean more to your children, be a closer and better pal to your husband, for you will grow spiritually and mentally, with a clearer understanding of the three graces of Federation-Democracy, Co-operation and Service.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Last Sunday morning on the Sequoia High School tennis courts, the El Camino Tennis Club started the second round of its tournament with the following results.

Girls' Singles

Ruth Adams defeated Margaret Peters 6-1; 4-6; 7-5.

Boys' Singles

George Seely defeated Owen Compton 6-2; 6-0; and Gordon de Holmes defeated Stanley Mayer 7-5; 4-6; 6-3.

The mixed doubles were not played because some of the players were absent, but they will be played next Sunday, and also the second round of the girls' singles will be finished. The remaining match in the girls' singles, is between Inez Jamieson and Martha Thompson and as both are quite evenly matched every one is looking forward to it, and expect a very exciting match.

"Y" FRIENDLY INDIANS TO CAMP OUT

The Friendly Indian Tribes of Redwood City, three in number, are looking forward to an overnight hike on Sriday of this week, returning Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Paul Orr, Ed Greeley and Roy A. Hohberger, Big Chiefs of these tribes are busy setting up the details. Plans are to leave Redwood for the hills shortly after school on Friday and go back into the hills a few miles for the camp. Each boy will bring a certain article of food as his share. Cars are being secured so that the bedding can be taken in them to a point about a quarter of a mile from the spot selected and then the boys will pack it in from there Fathers of the boys are invited to go along and enjoy the fun.

MILK INSPECTOR'S REPORT IS GOOD

On April 4th a surprise milk scoring contest was conducted by the airy Division of the State on all the milk sold in San Mateo county. It was found that the quality of milk distributed here had improved over 2% since the previous scoring contest. As this now brings the County's milk supply to a grade of 94.1% your milk inspector feels that the progress made calls for a word of commendation to the distributors and dairymen who by their co-operation with the milk inspection department have made this improvement possible.

The increase in the individual rating of many of the dairies was most noticable for a number raised their average over 10% and some improved from 15 to 18% over their previous score. As most of the dairies making these high increases sell only a small percentage of the entire county milk supply, the improvements made are scarcely reflected in the county's average.

This recent scoring of our milk ends the first six months of the county under a graded milk supply which was inaugurated last November when the state approved of our insepction service. Before this time no local milk men were allowed to place the marks "Grade A" on their bottles and the only graded milk sold came from outside the county or from dairies under San Francisco or Palo Alto inspection.

That constant supervision is necessary was demonstrated during the month when your inspector discovered that on several farms the proper sterilization of the dairy utensils was being omitted. When such occurs the laboratory tests quickly show an increase in the acid forming or souring bacteria which are ever present in milk. A visit to the farm usually discloses that for some reason or another the proper cleansing or complete sterilizaing of all utensils for 15 minutes in boiling water or over live steam has been neglected.

The increase in these acid forming bacteria in milk are usuelly not of themselves injurious to health but indicate neglect in caring for our most perishable and important food. If milk is allowed to continue to be produced under such lax conditions. the contamination by more injurious bacteria soon takes place and serious results may occur if the milk is given to small children.

This county's milk inspection department has the power to degrade milk which does not come up to county or state requirements or even exclude some from market and either one or both of these penalties will be imposed on any dairy which fails to comply with the law.

In the laboratory 110 samples of milk were tested during the onth. The county treasurer reports $228.48 collected in fees from th dairymen.

Respectfully submitted,
J. J. GARLAND,
Milk Inspector.

HI-Y HOLDS MOTHER'S NIGHT

One of the most delightful and worthwhile meetings of the Hi-Y Club has held this year was that of last Monday night which was put on in honor of Mothers.

The social room of the Congregational church was very tastefully decorated in red and white. The tables were decorated with large bouquets of red roses and at each plate was a red carnation.

Cuthbert Currie was the chairman of the evening. Between the courses songs were sung. Mrs. D. E. Moore, "Mother Moore", as all the boys like to call her, was the first speaker on the program. Mr. John Gill followed and on behalf of the club presented to Mrs. Moore a very appropriate gift. Mrs. Donald Bogie gave her im- Bogie was next and gave her impressions of the Hi-Y Club ending with a fitting challenge to the boys to live up to the things that make for the highest type of manhood. Arthur Lampkin, a member of the club, sang "Mother Machree" and "Pal of My Cradle Days." Wesley Haydock, another member of the club, spoke on what a boy expects of his mother and his duty toward her. Mrs. A. S. Kalenborn gave a most excellent talk on "What a Mother Expects of Her Son." An orchestra made up of members of the club also gave a number of selections.

A vote of thanks was given the ladies who helped prepare the splendid meal and to Mrs. Eikerenkotter who set the decorations.

ew York-Chicago Cable Unites Cities First Linked By Long Distance In 1892

Bell opening New York-Chicago Line, 1892.

Last Splice New York-Chicago Cable Line

HE first inter-city telephone line was built between Boston and Lowell. It was constructed by Charles J. Glidden, later of orld-tour fame, and so successful as it that the early telephone officials began to look further afield. line from Boston to Providence s projected, a distance of forty- e miles. At first this new line s a failure, but John J. Carty deloped the metallic circuit and s line became a success. Then s launched a more ambitious oject, the joining of New York d Boston by telephone.

Upon the completion of the New rk-Boston line the American lephone and Telegraph Company as organized to develop Long stance telephone lines between e principal cities of the country. line between New York and iladelphia was built and construction immediately began to connect New York and Buffalo. This was finally accomplished in the fall of 1888, but telephone engineers were not satisfied. Their ultimate dream was to build a telephone line that would connect the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, but first of all they looked forward to connecting New York and Chicago by telephone.

On October 18, 1892, Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, opened the line between New York and Chicago. Nearly a quarter of a century elapsed, however, before the range of transmission spanned the continent, but with the opening of the Chicago line, people in general began to realize that it was a question of time only, and the use of the Long Distance telephone became more general. People and business houses began to depend more and more upon this service.

But there was one fly in the ointment. The elements—rain, snow, sleet, floods and tornadoes—were no respecter of persons, nor of things. A severe storm often interfered with the service, in fact, it sometimes entirely disrupted it. One single sleet storm might cause millions of dollars damage. So the telephone engineers set out to work on another problem and, like the many that preceded it, they solved it. Gradually the open wire circuits were supplanted by aerial cable, and last summer an entire aerial cable line was completed between New York and Chicago and placed in service. This new line, representing one of the latest and most important developments in telephony, is virtually free from storm damage and particularly from sleet storms. As it stands completed, it gives assurance of a service capable of being expanded to meet future needs.

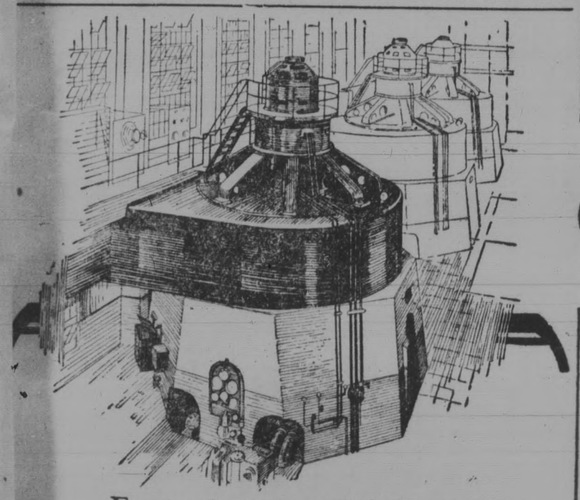
REV. CRANE TO PREACH AT BAPTIST CHURCH

The popular young preacher, Rev. Arthur B. Crane, will again be heard at the Baptist church, Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. In the evening the pastor will present Japan in a large assortment of beautifully colored stereoptican slides, showing something of the physical features of the country and its reigion, its pagan worship. The missionary hymn, "From Greenland's Icy Mountain," will be sung while a dozen or more pictures illustrating the hymn will be placed on the screen. The evening service will begin at 7:45.



From galvanized iron sheds to monuments of concrete and steel in power house construction—from generators of a comparatively few horsepower capacity to those of thousands of horsepower capacity—greater efficiencies with constantly reducing cost to you for energy, has been the achievement of California Power Companies.

These companies are ever on the alert, seeking thru study and research, to perfect those improvements that will make available for you, more power—always at the lowest cost consistent with class of service rendered.

Cleaning Without Odor by the F. Thomas Process

Our many years of experience has taught us that it is impossible to do perfect cleaning with cheap, inferior methods. That is why we found it necessary to invest nearly $500,000 in the equipment of a plant and the establishment of an expert organization to do the quality of work demanded by our customer.

With the "F. THOMAS PROCESS we do not only remove every particle of dust but we return your garments without that usual disagreeable smell of gasoline. Every drop of gasoline we use in cleaning is redistilled and very highly refined.

Raw gasoline — the kind that you buy fo you automobile — is full of heavy oils and unfit for cleaning fabrics. It is little better than ordinary distillate and leaves a sickening gasoline smell in your clothes.

"THAT'S MY BABY" PRESENTS FACILE FUNSTER IN FARCE TYPE OF FILM FOOLERY

Yes, sir, "That's My Baby" is coming to the Sequoia Theatre!

This new Douglas MacLean mirthquake, heralded as that popular comedian's funniest film, is scheduled to make its local debut next Wednesday and Thursday, May 12 and 13. The story was especially created for MacLean by George J. Crone and Wade Boteler, and provides him with ample opportunities to display his own particular brand of foolery.

William Beaudine, who jumped into directorial prominence with Mary Pickofrd's production of "Little Annie Rooney," wielded the megaphone on the MacLean vehicle, and is said to have turned out a picture that has an many laughs and thrills as a porcupine has quills. Joseph Franklin Poland attended to the adaptation.

The supporting cast is not the least of the production's attractions. Margaret Morris is the lovely heroine, whose ankle is responsible for many of MacLean's ticklish trials and tribulations. Claude Gillingwater, Eugenie Forde, Richard Tucker and Fred Kelsey are the others who add to the hilarious fun.

"DANCING MOTHERS" SHOWS FAST SET

If you're just a little tired of comedy; if Westerns bore you the least bit; if spectacles no longer make you leave your comfortable seat by the fireside; if you are one of that large army who have one, or many of the above symptoms—then you'rs going to enjoy the new Herbert Brenon Paramount picture, "Dancing Mothers," which will show at the Sequoia Theatre next Monday and Tuesday, May 10 and11.

For the benefit of those who did not see the Selwyn-Goulding stage play, it might be wise to explain that "Dancing Mothers" is described as a 'society drama.' But it is much more than that description would seem to imply.

"Dancing Mothers" is the tale of a pretty woman who was almost cheated out of life by a heartless daughter. As the mother who started out in order to save her child from throwing herself at a notorious bachelor, and ended by falling in love with him herself, Alice Joyce gives the finest performance of her career. And Conway Tearle in his role as the bachelor, rises to new heights. Clara Bow, known as the screen's perfect flapper, does her stuff as the child, does it well. Taking the picture as a whole, "Dancing Mothers" has been characterized by those who have seen it as "perfect entertainment."

Recalling Memories of Fauntleroy Craze

In his book, "The Turn of the Century, 1900-1904," Mark Sullivan cites a recent interview with Wallace Eddinger, who was one of the three child originators of the title role in "Little Lord Fauntleroy," by Frances Hodgson Burnett. Mr. Eddinger said: "The role was originated by three of us. • • • We all rehearsed it about the same time and we all played it at the Broadway theater in New York. I was only seven when I began the Little Lord Fauntleroy part. I played it all over the United States, Maine to California, and received as high as $250 a week. • • • To play the part, I had to have long golden curls. In addition, I had to wear white cuffs and be, oh, so sweet, on the stage. As a result, the other boys used to call me 'Sissy.' After a while a boy seldom got beyond the first part of the word before I slammed him in the nose. There were other kids who were glad when the 'Fauntleroy' vogue died, too. Their mothers were dressing them as counterparts of me in the role, and they were always getting into fights."

A Paradox

"It may seem paradoxical," said the librarian at an East side branch library, "but I find that the people who have the deepest appreciation of literature almost invariably are those who keep their library books beyond the allotted time. It isn't that they do not read the books but rather that they read them quickly, and perhaps buy others or borrow others, forgetting the books which should have been returned to the library."—Detroit News.

New health in Tanlac

"I suffered after eating, troubled with torpid liver, constipation, had no energy, lost 30 pounds. After taking Tanlac I made 100 per cent improvement and four bottles rid me of my troubles." J. E. Owen, 40 Clarendon Ave., Columbus, O.

This statement merely backs up what over one hundred thousand grateful users have said about Tanlac. Our files are packed with such testimony.

If your system is run down, if you can't seem to eat or sleep, have lost weight or suffer from trying pain, why not let Tanlac start you back to vigorous strength and health.

No long, wretched wait to get results! Tanlac starts right in to build you up. It cleans the blood, revitalizes digestive organs, fixes up the liver and makes you feel like a new person. For constipation take Tanlac Vegetable Pills.

The Water Bearer

CRYSTAL SPRINGS

Synopsis.—Idly fishing Hermanos creek, in California, Caleb Warner, civil engineer, and a New Englander, is witness of the end of a coyote pulled down by two wolfhounds, urged on by a girl rider. Admiring the hounds, he introduces himself, and learns her name is Clinton. With western hospitality she invites him to the ranch to meet her father. At the Clinton home Warner learns his new friend's name is Betty. He is welcomed by her father, Southern Civil war veteran and owner of Hermanos valley. Warner tells them something of his ambitions and his feeling that he is destined to be a "Water-Bearer." In the town of Golden Warner shares an apartment with his old Columbia college chum, Ted Baxter, carefree and somewhat dissipated youth, only child of his widowed mother, who controls the family fortune. At a club luncheon Baxter introduces Caleb to Wilbur Cox, leading business man and president of the water company which supplies the needs of Golden. He gives Cox an inkling of his ambitions, and Cox, impressed, invites him to dinner that night. During dinner Cox asks Caleb to call at his office next day. He does so and Cox arranges a meeting between Caleb and Hinckley, the water company's chief engineer.

"Present that at the gate to the watchman," he said. "He will get you in touch with Hinckley. The car is yours for the day."

He waved aside all thanks but he left Caleb pondering why he, with no other medium than Baxter's introduction and the fact that he had been in the same war with Jack Cox, and was a civil engineer with a professed leaning toward water development, should be tendered so many courtesies by this man of affairs. Western hospitality could not suffice for this. He surmised that Cox might be in special need of engineers but such a premise was only barely probable. He found Cox surveying him with shrewd eyes in which a glint of something, that might be either kindliness or humor, shone.

"Anything you'd like to ask me?" he queried. "I shan't sign anything until I come back after lunch, Harry," he said, in dismissal of the secretary. Caleb took the question as a clever method of examination. His inquiries would be apt to show his caliber in short order.

"I gathered, from what your son told me," he said, "and from what I heard of the talk at the table last night, that Golden faced, or was about to face, a water shortage that you considered prejudicial to the progress of the city. Is that so?"

Cox nodded, took a box of cigars from his desk drawer, handed it to Caleb, chose one himself, passed the matches and smoked for a few puffs before he answered.

"There is no mystery about it. It is an unpleasant fact. You are going to see the works tomorrow. I need not tell you that water is the life-blood of a city. It runs in its mains, in its flushing system, as it does through the arteries and veins of a body. Overbuild, without water, and you have atrophy, as you cannot expect the blood that is sufficient for a child to sustain the body of a full-grown man. We know today exactly how many gallons per capita we must figure on for a modern city with domestic, civic and manufacturing supply. The number of gallons in our reservoirs, divided by that ratio, marks the present limits of Golden's population, of its progress. And that limit is almost reached.

"We cannot get more watershed. To dig more wells—there are many artesian wells in the city—would only diminish present flows. Distillation is not practical. Already the lower peninsula is badly off for water. We need a Moses to strike the rocks for us. Perhaps he may come out of the East," he ended, the glint in his eyes plainly a twinkle now. "Anyway, Mr. Warner, there is the situation. There is a fortune for the man who can find a solution for the present shortage. We have some schemes in view but the cost prohibits them. The water supply must be pure as well as plentiful. Filtration alone is a serious problem.

"As to yourself? I should be only too glad to say we could use you in such development of Golden's water but none is forward. Would you care to connect yourself with a power company? One is now on paper—blue prints and stock, with the latter almost subscribed. It will take you up in the mountains. The berth will be open within a few weeks. I can arrange it for you."

"You know nothing of my qualifications," said Caleb. Cox smiled.

"I'll take a chance on my own judgment," he said dryly. "You won't last long if you are incompetent. And you don't appear that. The place is at Beaver Lake, in Stanislaus county. You'll be roughing it for accommodations, of course. But it'll be good practice in western methods. I fancy you'll find them different from eastern. Different type of labor, for one thing."

Caleb did not immediately fill the pause. He had made up his mind to study the Golden proposition. It did not seem possible that he should discover something that Cox and his experts had overlooked on their own ground but that nebulous thought was still persistent.

"Thank you, I shall be glad to consider it," he said finally. "Do you wish immediate acceptance?"

"Make up your mind before the first of the month."

There were sixteen days between then and the first of the next month. Time enough, Caleb thought, to do something with his theory, prove or discard it.

They walked up together to the Altruists. Caleb thought that Baxter might be there. Instead, there was a message to call up the apartment house.

"Want to see you, Cal," said Baxter. "If you haven't anything on that's important come for a spin with me. I know a little roadhouse over the San Mateo line where we can get some good chow."

As they motored Baxter commented on Cox's attitude.

"You don't owe me anything," he said. "Get that out of your head, for it is exactly what Cox meant to put into it. About the Beaver Lake job. Cox is one of those divided interests that have come together. Each side owned rights they wouldn't sell. I got to know about it over a real estate deal of my own—that didn't come off. Can't you see that it will be to Cox's advantage to have a man up there of his own choosing, on whose reports he can absolutely rely? That's why he's been nice to you—nothing much out of the way, at that. It's what you'd call using the personal element, I suppose."

Caleb was convinced that Baxter had something on his mind concerning his own affairs but he did not refer to them until the excellent lunch was finished.

"I'm in a mess, Cal," he said when the waiter was tipped and dismissed.

"Anything I can do, Ted?"

"I don't know. I want to talk it over. It's a girl."

The statement was almost unnecessary to Caleb but he said nothing.

"The 'peach' is turning out to be a citron. She's nice enough and a good sport and I believe she's fond of me. She says she is," he went on moodily. "And I've got to take her word for it. She wants me to marry her. And I can't. I won't. Whether it's the square thing to do or not. It wouldn't be the square thing. We'd be fighting in a month. We're miles apart in most things. You know, Cal."

"She thinks you have to marry her?"

"So she says. I can't disprove it. I'm not saying she lies. I might buy her off. I haven't got the money. She won't listen to reason—about the 'kid.'"

"It seems to me that's up to her. How long have you known her, Ted?"

"Little over two months. Her picture's on my bureau. In one of the silver frames. Just put it there. Oh, h—l!" He threw away his unsmoked cigar.

"What do you want me to do? See her? I—"

"No, that wouldn't do any good. But, we had a bit of a row. I suppose I didn't take the news gracefully. She swears I don't love her. Perhaps she doesn't altogether believe that—but she might. It's the truth, when you come right down to brass tacks. I suppose I'm a mucker, but I honestly believe I'd be a worse one if I married her."

"Well?"

"She talked about going away—till it was over with. She's a crackerjack of a stenographer. She can earn her own living anywhere when she's not handicapped. I think I could fix things so she would go, if I could raise the money to look out for her while she goes through with the thing. She's set to do that," he added gloomily. "Tried to reason with her but it was no go.

"It would take a couple of thousand dollars," he went on, talking more rapidly. "I've got a deal on. I've got some parties who want to buy land for a little colony. A bona-fide proposition and I'm handling it direct. I should make at least twenty thousand out of the deal. It's ripe. Got to come off pretty soon. But, I'm stumped as usual. You know that. What the mater sends just sees me through. I may have to raise some for an option. Could you let me have the two thousand, Cal? I don't know where else to go and I don't want to go shouting this thing about all over the shop."

"I've got just eleven hundred dollars in the bank here," said Caleb slowly. "If I take up Cox's proposition I'll not need more than two hundred of that to carry me over till the first pay check. I have a house back East I can sell. The deal might take a week or so. They take their time there to pass deeds. But. . . ."

Baxter groaned, his head in his hands.

"It's got to be two thousand, I'm afraid. You see if she goes away she'd be sore at me. I'd have to make her sore and she'd want the whole thing. And I won't have you selling your house. It wouldn't do any good. She'll change her mind inside of two weeks. It isn't so d—d imminent. She won't have to quit her job for a bit. At a pinch I'll make the mater come through. For the honor of the family!"

He laughed sarcastically.

"If she can chip off a hunk of the principal for herself once in a while she can do it for me—once. The money was meant for me eventually. And, if it's put right up to her, she'll handle the girl, too, rather than hinder her own matrimonial prospects, as a scandal would. Now let's take a run down to the duck club. I'm secretary and I've got to give the shack the overlook before the season opens."

Within the hour, tramping through the marshes to the shooting shack, he seemed to have forgotten his dilemma completely but one sentence, an epitome of Baxter's character, clung to Caleb. "Oh, I can stall along." He remembered, too, the hint of sullen stubbornness that had shadowed the girl's pouting lips.

CHAPTER V

Crystal Springs

Hinckley, head engineer of the Crystal Springs company, met the car at the outer gate of the property. He was a short, stout, but active man, with gold-rimmed spectacles over shrewd blue eyes about which spread a network of fine lines that spoke for humor and long habit of puckering under sun-glare. He reminded Caleb somehow of an apple, firm and glowing and sound.

They rolled swiftly on through a strange region and a beautiful one. Sometimes they skirted a hillside where chapparal, manzanita and kindred shrubs grew in a shoulder-high tangle that seemed too thick for anything less agile than a squirrel to explore. Beneath them flourished great ferns. Through them Caleb caught glimpses of lakes lying far below, bits of blue far deeper than the sky they mirrored and intensified.

They turned abruptly to their right where the road ran beside a purling stream and boughs knitted overhead. The descent was gradual and the car slid along noiselessly.

"Here's the brick dam, a bit primitive but a godsend to Golden in the old days," said Hinckley.

It was a beautiful sheet of water above the dam, set in the silence of a wooded canyon but they did not spend much time with it. Hinckley pointed directly across the water to a V-shaped gap in the opposing slopes.

"There's the big dam," he said. "I want you to notice the laterals, the earth dams that divide the lake into three. See anything funny about 'em?"

Caleb gazed earnestly. On each side of these dams was set a gatehouse. Their tops were roads with the sides fenced. And these roads were serpentine.

"Any reason for not building them straight from shoe to shore?" he asked. Hinckley emitted a satisfied sigh.

"Ah! They were built straight. The quake shifted 'em, twisted 'em, wrenched 'em, bent 'em—but it didn't break 'em. They're sound as ever."

Caleb looked his appreciation and bewilderment. Hinckley wrinkled his eyes.

"Clay cores, my boy. Clay cores. Elastic. Like so much rubber. They bend but never break."

"Did you anticipate an earthquake?" asked Caleb.

With Baxter in a "mess" and Cox and Hinkley apparently friendly, the plot thickens. What next?

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Calculation of Size of Statue of Apollo

The famous problem concerning the size of the colossal statue of Apollo on the island of Delos, which has worried so many savants, has finally been solved.

We are familiar with the Delos Apollo only in miniature, as represented on the Attic tetradrachm, an ancient Greek coin, where the god is shown holding the three Graces in his right hand.

At a recent meeting of the academy of inscriptions Theodore Reinach announced that he had calculated, with the aid of history as well as mathematics, the size of Apollo and the three Graces. This archaic colossus at Delos was the masterpiece, in gilded wood, of the sculptors Tectaois and Angelion who flourished between 550 and 530 B. C.

The three Graces, which were not grouped, but separated and erect, bore, respectively, the zyther, the double flute and the pipes of Pan. They stood in the palm of Apollo's right hand. In his left hand he carried a bow. The colossus and its three statues were destroyed by fire.

With the assistance of a Delian inscription which mentioned the weight of the gold crowns designed for the god and the Graces, M. Reinach estimated the relative heights of the figures as eight meters for the Apollo and one meter eighty centimeters for each of the Graces.—From Le Figaro Hebdomadaire, Paris. Translated for the Kansas City Star.

Insurance Method

Marine insurance is determined on an 80 per cent average loss. It exempts an insurance company from the payment of any partial loss or particular average insurance which exceeds a certain per cent of the value of the property. The particular average clause is sometimes applied to the value of each parcel or package or series of parcels and packages, according to invoice numbers. The differences between "With particular average" and "Free from particular average" is that the former has a particular average and the latter has not.

Can't Hurry Slow Thinker

Bright people must learn to be tolerant and patient with slower people, says the American Magazine. Failure to recognize this often gets a foreman into trouble with his men. Naturally, the foreman is likely to be brighter than those under him. And if he can't be tolerant with their slowness he is in for trouble. Trying to hurry naturally slow people is a foolish process. It hurts and irritates.

The duller a man is mentally, the less capacity he has to hurry. He can't hurry. You will never make a foreman or executive unless you are able to learn when your men are going at their best natural speed. If you push them beyond their limit—not your limit, but theirs—there is going to be a break.

Testimony by Telephone

Recently, testimony was taken by telephone in an American court. One of the witnesses for the commonwealth in an automobile accident case, had just returned home after being a patient in a hospital and was unable to attend court. He was called by telephone, the oath administered and his testimony transmitted and recorded by the court stenographer.

GREENS ARE GOOD EATING

The best of spring tonics are found in Mother Nature's own garden in the form of greens which are often weeds, but are much more wholesome than any tonic taken from a bottle.

This craving for green foods is gratified by serving the crisp, raw leaves, which are rich in iron, sulphur, lime and phosphorus, and at the same time because of their fibrous mixture afford a most effectual internal cleanser. If eaten with the snappy French dressing, this, too, is a stimulant, exciting the digestive organs, particularly the pancreas. The oil is a lubricant, so, with the acid and greens, it is easy to see how necessary green food is in the diet.

When planting a garden the weeding out for thinning should always be planned as a salad. Such small plants as turnips, cabbage, onions, beets, when very young, are delicious served raw, or later cooked in the form of cooked greens.

Wild mustard, sorrel, dock, cress and milkweed shoots are uncultivated greens which are rich in vitamines. The young shoots of milkweed when cooked taste much like asparagus.

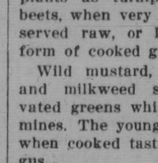
Dandelion Hot Slaw.—Take about three quarts of carefully picked and washed dandelion leaves. Fry out diced bacon in a hot skillet, then lay in the well-drained leaves, cover and simmer until the leaves are well wilted. Mix salt, pepper, a tablespoonful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of cream, adding enough vinegar to add zest to the dressing, add two beaten eggs and stir until well blended—not directly over the heat; pour over the greens and serve hot.

Blanched dandelion leaves found under boards or in sheltered spots are delicious cut up and served with shredded green onion and a French dressing.

Black walnuts, a half cupful coarsely chopped, sprinkled over a custard pie makes a most delicious, rich pie, if one likes the black walnut flavor.

Baked Eggs With Cheese.—Break four eggs into a buttered baking dish and cook in a hot oven until they begin to turn white around the edges. Cover the eggs with a white sauce, and over this a cupful of cheese and over the cheese a cupful of buttered crumbs. Bake until the crumbs are brown.

Sweets From Honey.



Those who "keep a bee" these days will find it most profitable. There are so many delicious dishes which may be prepared from honey. For the children there is no sweet more wholesome. A hive of bees in every back yard will furnish honey for a year. They tell us that the average hive yields 60 pounds of honey.

Honey Candy.—To one quart of strained honey take six tablespoonfuls of butter, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar and boil until it hardens in water. Flavor with a teaspoonful each of almond and lemon extract, add one-half teaspoonful of soda and pour into buttered pans to cool. Mark off into squares before it gets too hard.

Honey Fruit Cake.—Warm one-half cupful of brown sugar and one cupful of honey until it hardens in cold water. Remove from the heat, add one-half teaspoonful of soda, and all the puffed rice, wheat or popcorn that can be stirred into it.

Honey Blanc Mange.—Moisten six tablespoonfuls of cornstarch with one-fourth of a cupful of milk, add two cupfuls of boiling milk, and cook eight minutes; then add a pinch of salt and one cupful of honey. Mold in cups and serve with honey and cream, adding sprinkled nuts over each mold if desired.

Cauliflower Soup.—With a cupful or less or more of cooked cauliflower, a most tasty creamed soup may be prepared. Put the vegetable through a sieve and add to hot milk, season well and bind with two tablespoonfuls of butter and one of flour cooked well in the soup.

Asparagus Rabbit.—Cook diced asparagus until tender. Cover buttered toast with the cooked sliced asparagus, sprinkled with grated cheese, salt, cayenne and a little worcestershire sauce. Place in a hot oven or under the gas flame for a few minutes to melt the cheese. Serve at once with a poached egg in the center if desired.

Lemons will keep for several weeks if put into a dish of fresh water and the water is changed occasionally, washing the lemons.

Honey mixed with orange or any fruit juice with a bit of lemon juice makes a good dressing for a fruit cocktail.

Honey in place of sugar for doughnuts adds to their flavor and they do not dry so rapidly as those made of sugar.

A car for every purse and purpose

IN THE automobile industry several distinct price classes have developed. General Motors is represented in each.

The General Motors line of passenger cars comprises 52 different models. They include every open and closed body type and range in price-at-the-factory as follows:

CHEVROLET
6 Models—$510 to $765

PONTIAC
2 Models—$825

OLDSMOBILE
9 Models—$875 to $1115

OAKLAND
6 Models—$975 to $1295

BUICK
16 Models—$1125 to $1995

CADILLAC
13 Models—$2995 to $4485

Quality is the first law of General Motors; and sweeping economies, possible to an institution with the resources of General Motors, are reflected in the prices of General Motors cars.

Select the car that suits you from the General Motors line. You may buy it out of income on General Motors' time payment plan (GMAC), which assures fair terms and low rates.

Frog Farm on Large Scale

One of the largest frog farms in the country is under construction near Denton, Texas. Several dams are being built and a low, swampy region, already plentiful with frogs, is being further stocked. The frogs will be raised for Texas and other markets. One of the preliminary operations was the draining of the lakes to get rid of fish, a menace to frogs. Several miles of fence will be built round the lakes to keep out snakes, another enemy of frogs. The several lakes will be used for frogs of different ages.—Indianapolis News.

New Source of Gold

The world's gold supply may be considerably increased by the discovery of a new gold ore by an Italian engineer. The mineral exists in many European countries, and also in the United States, Mexico and South America, but until recently the presence of gold therein was unsuspected. Delfornite, which is the name given to the new ore, is found in rocky formations. It yields gold only to special processes, which have already been patented in several countries. As much as a kilogram of gold is refined from a ton of ore.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Senate Ratifies Settlement of Italy's Debt—Turkey Alarmed by Mussolini.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SETTLEMENT of Italy's war debt to the United States, as arranged by the joint debt commissions, was finally approved by the senate, despite the efforts of a considerable number of both parties led by Senators Borah and Reed. The vote in favor of the funding of the debt was 54 to 33. Reed of Missouri voted in the affirmative in order that he might make, next day, a quite useless motion to reconsider so that Senator Howell's amendments might be debated.

The Italian agreement provides for the funding of a debt of $2,042,000,000, including principal and accrued interest, over a period of 62 years. During the first five years Italy is to pay $5,000,000 annually without interest. After the first five years interest is fixed at one-eighth of 1 per cent for ten years and then increases, for successive ten-year periods, to one-fourth of 1 per cent, one-half of 1 per cent, three-fourths of 1 per cent, 1 per cent, and, for the last seven years, 2 per cent.

When the agreement is fully carried out, for an original debt of $1,648,000,000 the United States will have received during the period a total of $2,407,000,000, of which $759,000,000 is interest.

The calculation that the Italian funding represents a settlement of 28 cents on the dollar is based on the difference between interest paid by Italy for 62 years and the 4¼ per cent paid by the United States government to Liberty bond holders who furnished the money for the war loans.

Consideration of the debt settlements with Belgium and other minor countries was begun by the senate, with every prospect that the terms agreed upon would be ratified.

Dispatches from Paris said Premier Briand had informed the foreign affairs committee of the French senate that Ambassador Berenger and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon had agreed in principle on a plan for funding the French debt. It was understood the political and commercial debts would be merged and that France would pay annuities, beginning at $25,000,000 and rising to $100,000,000, until 62 years have elapsed. While the "safeguard clause" is to be abandoned, France's capacity to pay at any time in the future might be revised on the basis of the amount it was possible to collect from Germany.

REPRESENTATIVE GORMAN of Illinois, who said he wanted to save his colleagues in other states from being defeated on the World court issue as was Senator McKinley, offered in the house a resolution repudiating the Burton resolution approving American adhesion to the World court, passed by the house a year ago. The Gorman resolution would have the house of representatives express the hope that the United States will immediately take the necessary steps to keep out and stay out of the World court. The resolution provides further that the house "express its disapproval of the League of Nations and its agency, the World court, and declare that it will not make any appropriation for dues or other expenditures of the United States as an integral part of the discredited World court or of the British seven-votes-to-our-one League of Nations."

Secretary of State Kellogg, expressing the administration view that no new agreement is necessary to give effect to the conditions and reservations on which the United States is prepared to adhere to the permanent court of international justice, has formally declined to send a delegate to Geneva in September to explain those conditions and reservations to the conference of the forty-eight signatory powers of the court. He pointed out that the senate reservations provide specifically that they must be accepted by an exchange of notes between the United States and each of the powers and said he saw no difficulty in the way of securing the assent of each signatory in this way. Greece already has accepted the American reservations.

BENITO MUSSOLINI and his Roman empire plans continue to excite and disturb the Old world. The latest story is that Italy and Greece have made a secret treaty directed against Turkey and that if they are able to carry out their plans Italy will get a huge slice of southern Asia Minor including the port of Selenti and that Greece will recover Smyrna and Constantinople and the contiguous territory. Jugo-Slavia is to be given a piece of Albania, all of which country she wants. England's neutrality it is hoped can be obtained through support of her claims to Mosul and promises to end the Fascist agitation in India; and the assistance of France is to be the price of help in the pacification of the Druses in Syria.

That there is something in this story is indicated by the alarm manifested by Turkey. She has been calling out her classes of recruits for intensive military training, and great military maneuvers are to be held by President Mustapha Kemal Pasha next month in western Asia Minor. Extensive fortification against the Greeks along the Thracian frontier is reported. Naturally Turkey is eagerly seeking British support. It was said in London that Sir Austen Chamberlain let Angora know that if it wanted real protection it must join the League of Nations as soon as possible. The Angora government is divided, some leaders favoring the plan to yield to England in the matter of Mosul, and others urging that the support of Russia be accepted and the British defied. Kemal is said to be of the latter party.

FEDERAL officers, bishops and other clergymen, heads of reform organizations and various other persons followed one another in rapid succession before the senate committee to tell of the benefits wrought by prohibition and to decry the suggestion of weakening the enforcement law. United States District Attorney Edwin A. Olson of Chicago was one of the witnesses, and he at least succeeded in arousing the anger of Chicago's officials. Making vigorous charges of lax enforcement of the criminal laws in Chicago, he said it was safer for a man there to commit daylight robbery with a gun than to violate the Volstead act, and added that that act has not yet had an honest chance in Chicago and that prior to 1923 it had no chance whatever.

"I do not know," he said, "how many stills are operating in Chicago, but there are many. It is safe to assume, however, that there is not a still of importance in any police precinct that is not known to the police in that precinct and that it would not be a very big job for 5,000 policemen to pull out by the roots every outlaw still in Chicago in twenty-four hours."

He said the citizens of Chicago have not "intestinal fortitude enough to provide themselves with the kind of local government that will send murderers and robbers where they belong."

In a fine frenzy of rage Mayor Dever, accompanied by Chief of Police Collins, started at once for Washington and in the last hours of the hearing they told the senators that Mr. Olson was a prevaricator and, in effect, was "all wet." He asserted the only men in Chicago who tried honestly to enforce the Volstead act were Chief Collins and himself, and that Mr. Olson never did act until they forced him to do so.

Dr. J. M. Doren, chief chemist for General Andrews, presented figures to show that District Attorney Buckner of New York grossly exaggerated the amount of industrial alcohol diverted to illegal uses. Father Curran of Wilkesbarre contradicted the testimony of Father Kasaczun concerning conditions in the anthracite region. Charles Stelzle denied that organized labor was a unit for modification of the Volstead act. And S. L. Strivings, representative of the National Grange, testified the farmers were for strict enforcement, admitting under cross-examination that they would be opposed to repeal of section 29 which permits farmers to make wine and cider for their own use. These were only a few of the more important of the many witnesses heard.

New York's legislature passed a bill for a state referendum on whether congress should modify the enforcement act to permit the manufacture, sale and use of beverages not in fact intoxicating, as determined in accordance with the laws of the respective states.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals in New York handed down a decision which seriously affects the rum treaties with Great Britain and Norway and may even render them invalid. The decision held that the treaties under which the government had been boarding vessels within an hour's steaming distance of the coast do not constitute a law extending territorial limits of the United States beyond the three-mile limit. It was rendered in dismissing the libel proceedings brought by the government against the Sagatind, a Norwegian vessel, and the Diamantina, which flew the British flag.

PEACE negotiations of the French, Spanish and Riff representatives reached a deadlock and the conference was adjourned indefinitely to permit the delegates to get further instructions from their governments. Meanwhile a truce was declared in Morocco, which may, however, be broken at any moment. General Simon, chief of the French delegation, says France is determined to make peace with the Riffians. He declared: "Our firm intention is not to resume war, despite certain misunderstandings and exceptions taken by the Riffian delegation in their communique. We shall resume war only if we are absolutely driven to it."

PEKING'S fate and that of the Chinese government hangs in the balance. When the national army abandoned the capital President Tuan resumed the control but a day or two later, as troops from Marshal Chang's Manchurian army entered the city he fled to Tientsin with his adherents. Marshal Wu Pei-fu has not, at this writing, declared himself and remains with his forces outside Peking. Public bodies are urging that he and Chang get together and form a government, but in Canton it is predicted that the two marshals will clash and that complete chaos in northern China will result. The Canton government sees in this a chance to overthrow militarism and unite the country on the principles of Dr. Sun Yat-sen.

DAUGHTERS of the American Revolution, holding their thirty-fifth continental congress, were addressed by President Coolidge, who called especial attention to the increasing disregard for voting, warning that it threatened the doom of the republic.

"The perilous aspect of this situation," said the President, "lies in its insidiousness. With the broadening of popular powers, the direct election of practically all public officials, and the direct nomination of most of them, there is no opportunity for an expression of the public will except at the ballot box. We are placing our reliance on the principle of self-government. But if the people fail to vote, government will be developed which is not their government."

Mrs. Alfred Brosseau of Connecticut was elected president general of the society without opposition.

OGDEN T. M'CLURG of Chicago, wealthy head of the publishing house that bears his name and one of the country's leading explorers and yachtsmen, died suddenly of cerebral hemorrhage soon after returning from a trip to Yucatan. During the war he was a lieutenant commander in the navy and chief of staff for Captain Moffett at the Great Lakes station.

Another notable death of the week was that of Sir Squire Bancroft, veteran actor-manager who was known as the dean of the English stage.

TRIAL of Col. A. S. Williams of the marines by court-martial in San Diego on charges of intoxication preferred by Gen Smedley Butler is believed to have resulted in his conviction, though the verdict has not been made public. The case attracted wide attention because at the time of the alleged offense General Butler had just been the colonel's guest at a party where cocktails were served.

Ponzi's Vivid Career Appears Near End

Jacksonville, Fla.—Charles Ponzi, the dapper little money wizard whose $5,000,000 flop in New England in 1920 threw him into focus as the most persistent hatcher of schemes for unrivaled wealth in national history, saw another bubble pricked when Judge Peeler sentenced him to one year at hard labor for violation of the Florida real estate law.

Ponzi, under stay of execution of sentence of five years in Massachusetts state prison, hurried to Florida last fall, where he hoped during the time given him to retrieve his fortunes in Florida land manipulation.

Sale of lots at 200 per cent profit—a stroke he declared possible through fluctuations of land values—was the basis of his latest scheme for sudden wealth.

The dapper little man who coaxed $5,000,000 from the pockets of working people throughout New England and kidded the district attorney who secured his conviction in the Massachusetts courts, is thoroughly discouraged.

Hard labor in Florida means road gangs that swelter in the tropical heat while they make smooth the road of American plutocrats on their way to the American Riviera. Ponzi in the stripes of the convict halting his labor to watch sleek motors roll by may recall his own days of wealth in Boston when mansions and servants and the appointments of fortune were his.

NELLIE REVELL Says:

FAME and fortune are things that not everyone can have. But to have a friend, even though he be only a four-legged one, compensates for a lot of things. In the public ward of the hospital in which I once dwelt, there lay a human derelict. He had no visitors, he had no money, but he did have one friend.

Day and night for eleven weeks a yellow creature of the type commonly referred to as "pup," "ki-yoodle," or "cur" gave a marvelous exhibition of loyalty while pawing out a living from the garbage cans at the rear of the hospital where his owner was confined.

Pete—for that, I understand, was the dog's name—never left the sidewalk, from the day he arrived in the wake of the patrol wagon in which his friend was brought. Once he eluded the doorman, gained admittance to the hospital and found his way to a cot. There he heard "his master's voice." Whatever understanding they had between them seemed to satisfy Pete, for he went out and resumed his vigil at the door.

Every box office treasurer hears of defective vision and hearing so often he thinks an eye and ear hospital should adjoin every theater. A prospective patron mumbled something about, "Can't see very well and a little deaf," to Charles Thomas in the box office at the Century theater in New York last week. At the moment Thomas was toying with a bank pin which he accidentally flicked out of his hand to the public side of the window.

The patron, a courteous, middle-aged woman, immediately stooped with alacrity, picked up the pin from the floor and restored it to Thomas through the window. The treasurer could not resist a smile at the thought of the alleged defective vision. The woman "got wise" also.

"I'm taking my grandmother," she said. "It's she who can't see very well and it's my hearing that's bad."

The alibi was good for "two down front."

Someone is always inquiring how my trouble started, and how did it happen, meaning, when did I first notice I had been shell-shocked in the battle of life. That question is about as easy to answer as "How high is up?" It is as impossible to determine when it started as it is when it will end. And the contributing causes were as numerous as the treatments. It came slowly and gradually. The doctor said it would leave the same way. I know now he was right about the "slowly." But I have found out what hope is. It's the thing that, when you are playing solitaire and find yourself stuck without a move, makes you run through the deck once more trusting you'll find a way out. That's hope.

Whatever illusion I may have had that I was good copy was dissipated recently by my nurse.

In taking me out of bed she always lifts my feet first before attempting to hoist me up. The other day she swung me around, and, reaching under my shoulders, stood me on my feet. I landed right in the waste basket that was standing near the bed. Which makes me wonder if she is as ignorant of newspaper customs as she pretends to be. If it really was accidental or if she has a news sense. One thing is certain, that if she dumps me in the wastebasket I will escape the composing room and will not be left in the overset.

Some time when you are "bored to tears," suffering from ennui or delving for a new thrill just try bringing (not sending) a few boxes of candy to the children's hall of some hospital. Or a few cartons of cigarettes to the men's hall (be sure to include matches), or a few baskets of fruit to the women's hall.

Ask the person in charge to let you see her distribute it, and if you don't say you have had the thrill of your life it is time for you to leave this planet and seek a new universe, for there isn't a thrill left in you.

"Do you think I'm happy?" as the late-lamented Joe Welch used to say in opening his monologue. I was far from it. I was not having half the fun in the hospital that my mental flip-flops might have led others to believe. Those who know me can hardly imagine me convulsed with joy at having to lie on my back all done up like Joan of Arc, staring at the ceiling of a sunless room for four years. The only outside views of life I had were through a window which overlooked some factories and wholesale houses.

But there was one other thing to be seen through the window and whenever I felt myself yielding to an attack of self-pity I looked at it—the flag atop the Fourteenth street armory. The sight of it made me think of those boys who got their wounds doing some real good for the world and are still in casts and braces and on hospital cots far from home and friends. When I compared my lot with theirs it made me hate my impatience and wish I could divide some of my luxuries and comfort with them. It wasn't treason—but it seemed to me that the theatrical folk were taking better care of their wounded than the government was.

Thief Had Conscience

An automobile belonging to W. T. Williamson, of Lodi, Cal., was stolen. Two weeks later he received a letter telling him how to recover it. The writer of the letter said that he had borrowed the machine to go to the post office, where he found a letter saying that he had a job at King City. "So I went right that night," the letter reads. Inclosed was a $5 bill "to pay expenses" and the letter closed with expressions of appreciation for the use of the machine.

NO WOMAN CAN KEEP HOUSE EFFICIENTLY

Without Good Health

MRS. FRANK DINDORE 823 PIERCE AVENUE, LANCASTER, OHIO

Four Walls Can Make a House, but it takes a Woman to Make a Home

To be a successful homemaker, a woman must guard her health. When mother is not well, the home is upset. Women everywhere are learning through their own personal experiences, as these women did, the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lancaster, Ohio.—"For ten years after my marriage, I had poor health. I was on a visit to my sister in Utica, Michigan, and she had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Her husband got me a bottle and I took it and felt so much better that I got a second one. Now, whenever I feel run-down I take the Vegetable Compound and soon feel all right again. I have had three little girls in the last six years and do all my housework, sewing, washing, and ironing. My time is pretty well taken up, but I will answer any letters I receive."—Mrs. Frank Dindore, 823 Pierve Avenue, Lancaster, Ohio.

Sturgis, Michigan.—"I am very thankful for what your medicine has done for me and have recommended it to others. I took it to give me strength before my baby was born. I would have to stop work and lie down sometimes all the afternoon. I felt as if I did not care whether anything was done or not. I got tired out so easily. One day I found a little book on my porch and that night I showed it to my husband and he went down town and got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The medicine has helped me so much that I was soon able to do my work, and when my baby was born, my nurse, Mrs. Forbes, said it was the easiest birth she had ever attended. I will be more than pleased if I am helping someone else by giving my testimonial."—Mrs. Edward Persino, 208 Surprise Ave., Sturgis, Michigan.

Ship Under Odd Flag

A ship without a country plies in the oil service out of San Pedro, Cal., and proves a puzzle to harbors of the world. It is the tanker Niobe, which carries gasoline from San Pedro to Hamburg, Germany. The Niobe was built in Germany during the war, and afterward allotted to the United States. While the United States did not accept ownership of the vessel, the shipping board controls it and allotted the tanker to the Standard Oil company. An American crew is carried, although the ship has no American papers. For a flag, the Niobe carries that of the interallied maritime council.

Effective Bookbinding

Covering books with colorful bindings not only gives an added note of interest to the bookshelf but protects the books. Books can easily be bound with wall paper, cretonne, chintz and pieces of old brocaded silks. It is always advisable to either varnish or shellac the material used, to give it a nice as well as lasting finish.

Palestine's Big Fair

The midwest fair, held with much success in the city of Tel Aviv, Palestine, last year, was reopened in Tel Aviv by the British high commissioner on March 26, 1926. The newly-established Palestine industries are reported to be making an effort to have their goods well represented and, according to local reports, special interest is being shown in the fact that the first pianos manufactured in Palestine are exhibited.

Trustees Preparing For Election

The grammar school trustees are preparing for a special election to take place very soon to secure funds to erect a branch school building at Stanford Park. The local grammar school is over crowded and some means must be provided for more room. The amount sought to be raised is $18,000 or a rate of about seventy cents on the one hundred dollars of assessable property in the district. This amount will provide a suitable site and a two-room structure sufficient to supply all the demands of that growing district for the present.

"Classified" This Evening

The New Menlo Theatre will give two shows this evening and two on Sunday evening. A matinee is scheduled for this afternoon. This evening the picture will be "Classified," Connie Griffith featuring and the comedy will be "Up in the Air." Sunday night "Limited Mail" a Warner Brother's special, will be presented. Professor Zenovich, the noted musician, will preside at the big and costly organ on both occasions. The New Menlo Theatre should be filled to the doors on these occasions to show the appreciation of the people for Mr. Braden's enterprise in giving Menlo Park one of the finest show houses on the peninsula.

Big Catches Reported

All local Ike Waltons sought the mountain streams Saturday, the opening of the trout season, and all report splendid sport in landing the speckled beauties. Will Casey, the expert fisherman, went to the headwaters of the Pescadero creek, where he caught the limit. Harold O'Keefe and Thomas Kearney fishing in the same stream and were equally successful in getting good baskets of truot. William E. Reilly, the well-known real estate man, chaperoned a party of young fishermen consisting of Edward O'Keefe, Desmond Sullivan, Richard Roach, George Larrouy. They sought the headwaters of the Soquel river in the Santa Cruz mountains. Mr. Reilly is a seasoned fisherman and taught the embryo fishermen the tricks of the sport. All secured the limit in fair sized trout. The boys camped in the mountains along side of the stream and had a delightful time in preparing their meals, casting their lines and listening to the sweet songs of the orioles.

Menlo Park C. of C. Row Placed Before Supervisor

That the board of directors of the Menlo Park Chamber of Commerce do not as a body sanction the action taken by J. H. Sullivan, president of that body was the statement of F. J. Furnival, director of the organization in a letter sent to the board of supervisors Monday. The action to which Furnival takes exceptions is the statment said to have been made by Sullivan that "except for the board of supervisors, San Mateo county is represented by the finest body of officials in the State of California."

The letter submitted by Furnival is a copy of one which he sent to the board of directors of the Menlo Park Chamber of Commerce, calling upon that body to reove Sullivan from the presidency and to appoint someone else.

His letter was in part as follows:

"Therefor, having in mind the fact the supervisors are chosen by a majority of the electors, and as said supervisors have to the best of my knowledge and belief conducted the affairs within their jurisdiction in an entirely creditable manner, I respectfully represent that Mr. Sullivan's utterances are highly injurious and predicial to this chamber as a body, its members as individuals, and to Menlo Park and vicinity.

"I, therefore, lay before your honorable body the charges as hereinbefore set forth in ordr that the same may be of record in the minutes of this chamber, and urge that this communication be given the fullest possible publicity in no way less that that accorded the disparaging utterances herein complained of. Be it further known that I reserve the privilege of submitting a copy hereof to any and all newspapers circulating within this county.

"In view of the gravity of the indiscretions indulged in by the said John H. Sullivan, I deem it proper to suggest that this body do now pass a vote of censure upon him; that his place on the board of directors be declared vacant ;that another person be elected to fill such vacancy, and that a chairman be chosen from the members of the board.

"Respectfully submitted,
"F. F. FURNIVALL."
